that enhanced her personal development, increased her physical health, and offered the opportunity of self-expression. After trying many activities, she developed a unique passion for ballroom dance.

Upon graduating from college, Emily started teaching professionally at Dance Plus Ballroom and continues to share her passion with her students. She incorporates her background as an English scholar and twelve-year student of Cello Performance to develop students' critical thinking and life skills. She looks forward to creating an open and respectful atmosphere where everyone can learn how to fulfill their personal potential. Most importantly, Emily is excited to share the benefits of ballroom dance and strives to instill grace and confidence into her students.
